Women's National team coach 2017–2019 – Job description

Floorball New Zealand has had Women's National teams playing in World Floorball Championship Qualification Tournaments in 2015 and 2017. The team has made strong improvements since the first tournament in 2015 and placed 6th at the last Qualification tournament held in New Zealand in January 2017. The team is still very young and it is anticipated that a large part of the players from the 2017 squad will still be available for selection for the next campaign. In addition to that, a strong young group of players is coming up, with the first NZ U19 Women's team playing at the World Floorball Championship Final in 2018 testament to that.

The next qualification tournament will be held in January/February 2019 and Floorball NZ will be looking at entering a team again into that event. It is not yet known where that tournament will be held and what other countries from the Asia–Oceania region will compete in it.

Should the New Zealand team qualify, they would travel to the World Floorball Championship Finals held in Switzerland from 7 to 15 December 2019.

Floorball New Zealand is committed to further improve and strengthen the Floorball performance of the New Zealand National teams. Therefore, Floorball New Zealand is looking to engage an experienced and passionate Floorball head coach for the Women's National team for the campaign of the 2017–2019 World Floorball Championships. The head coach who will lead, train and coach the team until the Qualification Tournament in 2019 and in the case of qualification, also to the World Floorball Championships in Switzerland in 2019.

As a driven coach, the candidate will easily demonstrate strong ability to lead and inspire a dedicated squad and leverage experience, knowledge and skills of all that is required to be successful in Floorball. The selected head coach will become a vital part of Floorball New Zealand and be integral to the development of the sport in the near future.

The successful applicant will have:

- A real passion for Floorball and the development of individual players as well as a positive team culture and spirit
- A strong dedication to work with young and developing players and help them become a strong part of future National teams
- Experience in working with teenagers, and showing understanding of their needs and ability to address these
- A proven track record in coaching and playing Floorball at a high level
- An excellent knowledge of Floorball skills, techniques and team tactics
- Effective and confident communication skills to work effectively with players, squad, manager, parents and other stakeholder
- A positive and supportive attitude to inspire and encourage all players and create an inclusive team environment

Job Description

- Role: Women's National Team Head Coach
- Place of work: Predominantly Wellington, ASB Sports Centre, Kilbirnie, other places as required
- Reports to: Committee of Floorball New Zealand
- Works with: Floorball New Zealand Committee
- National Team manager
- Other coaching and team staff
- Players and parents of players
- Job purpose: The purpose of this role is to develop and build up the performance of the New Zealand Women's National team. This involves working with individual players as well as developing effective team tactics and strategies.

MAIN DUTIES & RESPONSIBILITIES:

- Plan, prepare and deliver training weekends and training days for the National team. This includes preparing team based and individual training plans for the time between training days/weekends.
- Visit Floorball NZ events (Championship Series, tournaments, etc.), local club trainings, local leagues, etc. to scout for potential players and talk to players about upcoming training events.
- Select the final Women's National team (maximum of 20 players) out of the training squad in conjunction with two other selectors appointed by Floorball NZ.
- Communicate regularly with players and their parents, setting appropriate goals and targets for individuals to work on in their own time or with their respective Club teams.
- Liaise and communicate with regional clubs and their coaches to identify suitable talent to be included in the training squad.
- Lead and coach the New Zealand Women's National team during the World Floorball Championships Qualification Tournament in 2019 with the aim to qualify for the World Cup Finals in December 2019.
- Provide coaching expertise or mentoring in the areas of; individual skills (ball control, shooting, passing), team tactics and fitness.
